Social Determinants of Health Screening & Referral – Best Practices, Lessons Learned, and Supporting Your Practice's Journey to Address Social Needs

Key Takeaways and Highlights from Dr. Jeffrey Colvin's Presentation

View Recording \(Start Time: 4:35\) | Slide Deck

- A family's income may not be a good indicator of the family's need of resources
- Patients and families appreciate being asked about social issues
- A pediatrician's role is to serve as a connector – to refer patients and families to a resource. A pediatric practice must:
 - Ask the right questions
 - Learn about the community resources available
 - Connect the patient to the right resource
- Select a "superuser" in your practice who can help identify community resources in the area
- When referring a patient to a community resource:
 - Rely on full-service, "no wrong door" community organization that can help with multiple needs
 - Utilize Lift Up KC (<https://liftupkc.org/>)

Key Insight: Address social needs by listening, referring, and connecting patients to community resource 'specialists'.

Contact Dr. Jeffery Colvin (jdcolvin@cmh.edu) or Dr. Courtney Winterer (cmwinterer@cmh.edu) for technical assistance for you or your office's super user regarding SDOH screening and community resources.

Integration of Behavioral Health Services into Primary Care – Updated Resources to Support Your Practice

- Suicide is the 2nd leading cause of death in people age 10-24. Early detection is a critical prevention strategy.
- Behavioral health integration is incorporating mental health care into primary care settings for the purpose of improving the quality of care, reducing stigma, and increasing access.
- Models of integrated behavioral health include:
 - Coordinated – communication is the key element
 - Co-located – proximity is the key element
 - Integrated – practice change is the key element
- For information on behavioral health integration and behavioral health resources in the community, review the Behavioral Health in Primary Care Manual \(Integration\)
- For information on suicide screening, assessment, and triage, review this supplemental Behavioral Health in Primary Care Manual \(Suicide Screening\)

New Online Educational Series called 'Prepped & Ready: Experts Edition' for Your Practice's Parents & Families of Teenagers

The video series will be available Oct. 4 to 21 at childrensmercy.org/PreppedAndReady. Caregivers who agree to complete a pre and post survey as a part of our research will be mailed a free toolkit. We hope this education will help prevent some of the painful experiences children experience, and arm parents with the skills and information to help their teen.
